

Joan and family – living harmoniously under one roof

Joan and her husband Brian adopted Jojo, a very handsome cat, before they had their first child. It has been one year since the birth of their child and today, the couple has managed to strengthen the bond between their kid and furkid by teaching them how to interact with one another and to respect each other's space.

Here's how you can ensure harmony in your household when you have a kid and furkid living under one roof:

Cleanliness

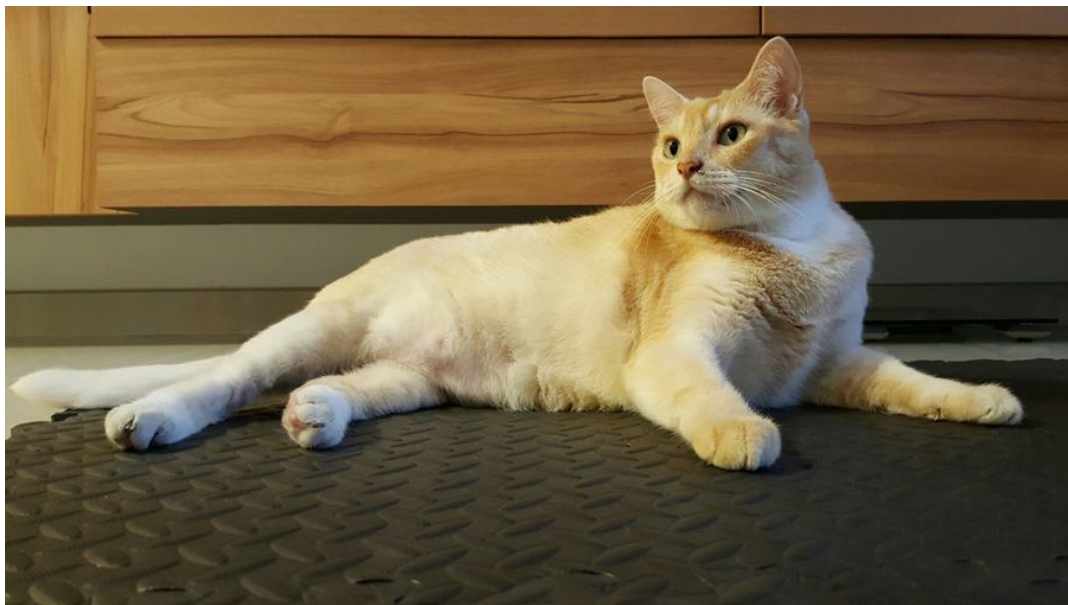

Clean the house everyday and be extra mindful of hygiene during pregnancy especially if the mom is the one cleaning up after the cat.

Guidance

Teach both the kid and the furkid how to behave appropriately towards each other. When the kid learns to be gentle, the cat will start trusting the kid. Sensible parenting is crucial to maintaining harmony in the household.

Routine

There will come a time when both the kid and the furkid will require attention at the same time. Just work out the kinks in the routine so that everybody's happy and peaceful.

Handsome Jojo posing for the camera

Supervised interaction

Jojo in the most comfortable box in the room